1. No. The satellites have been asleep. But we have received a request to operate AC5C in November.
2. The satellites are at 520x771 km altitude. They will not decay for more than 10 years, depending on solar activity. We are requesting only a 2 year license extension believing that the electronics will likely fail by then. We do not know if the satellites will be called up for another experiment within that period.
