

Range resolution for intended targets will work fine in testing at 300 MHz - later testing (new application to file) will probably go to 1 GHz. See graph.

This initial testing is mainly for main system testing and initial target identification issues.

