

This radar designed and assembled by Florida State University will be used in the state of Florida and elsewhere to study extreme weather events. We will focus on hurricane landfalls and tornadogenesis. Funding will come from the State of Florida as well as NSF, NASA and other federal agencies. The radar will be free to go to study the weather where ever it occurs.