OK, I will treat this as your request to withdraw the experiemental application and dismiss it. Good luck...

According to Sylvia, all Inmarsat applications now have to go through the IB: she advised me to file form 312 with them.

Thanks for your assistance.

Better call Sylvia Lam of IB. She can advise if you should file with them or with us. (202) 418-0742

I just spoke to Telenor's legal department and they told me about the restrictions that come with their blanket authority such as using only TeleNor/COMSAT Earth Stations in the US, which is limiting for us, as we have used other stations while doing testing. He then told me to just go ahead and submit/complete the application with the FCC, though he was under the impression that as of October 2001, Inmarsat applications should be granted by the International Bureau (Form 214 I believe?) rather than the Experimental Licensing Branch, as Inmarsat is now a registered system in the US. Can you confirm this? Though these are 100% off-the-shelf Inmarsat terminals, we are using them for research purposes to eventually put one up on the Space Station, so I am not sure if we still fall under the "Experimental" category.

Thanks
