

The Coastal Ocean Currents Monitoring Program (COCMP) is a state-funded, program to establish surface current monitoring using CODAR systems. This program will facilitate real-time availability of these data to the public. This program is a funded for four full years (as of 2005), therefore we're requesting FCC Experimental Operating Licenses for a duration of four years, as we'd like these systems to run continuously during the funded period.