

It is expected that intermittent field tests will be required over the next two years to facilitate development and testing of this transmitter technology. Each test period would be 2-3 weeks in duration, occurring no more than 4 times per year. The first test period is currently scheduled for the period of October 3 through October 23, 2002. The typical test day would consist of 1 shot per half-hour for 10 hours.