I reached out to both Jeremiah Sullivan and Bryan Rhodes. They are concerned about interference to specific satellites with overlapping frequencies. We are not able to narrow down our launch window due to the fact that our rocket is still in development. I proposed we use the same system for our previous launches, where we received pass times from NASA via daily emails and for satellites that we needed to protect we used those pass times as no-fly periods. That seemed to work pretty well.

I've not heard back from either Jeremiah or Bryan.
