Raytheon Intelligence & Space acquires Blue Canyon Technologies

ARLINGTON, Va., (December 21, 2020) – Raytheon Technologies (NYSE: RTX) today announced it has completed the acquisition of privately-held Blue Canyon Technologies, a leading provider of small satellites and spacecraft systems components. Blue Canyon Technologies will report into Raytheon Intelligence & Space.

“Adversaries are aggressively developing space and counter-space capabilities faster than ever before,” said Roy Azevedo, president of Raytheon Intelligence & Space. “We must be able to rapidly deliver capabilities across satellite classes and orbits, and Blue Canyon will further our ability to do that.”

Based in Boulder, Colorado with more than 200 employees, Blue Canyon Technologies was founded in 2008. The company currently has more than 90 satellites in production, and has supported missions for the U.S. Air Force, NASA and the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency.
