To Whom It May Concern,

On or about July 7, 2005, I received an email and a voicemail concerning the FCC application I submitted. While I believe they were both from Mr. Young (dyoung@fcc.gov), I am uncertain as I did not retain the voicemail information after responding via telephone. When I spoke to this gentleman and gave him the missing information and he said that he would take care of it and I was under the impression that I needed to take no further action. Today, I returned from a work trip lasting the month and have received a letter stating that my application was DISMISSED-WITHOUT PREJUDICE due to my lack of response. My question at this point is one of what do I need to do from this point with the application if I wish to have it approved. Do I need to resubmit from the beginning or is there a way to correct this and continue?

regards,
