

Project Description

Lockheed Martin is seeking approval for its application for an Experimental Radio License to advance technological innovation in the field of Electronic Warfare.

The testing will use a commercial signal generator with a horn antenna to radiate test signals at Electronic Support receiver systems. Signal processing of the received signal is performed to enable identification of test signal waveform characteristics. Such enhanced data collections will provide technology advancements in the detection of military signals-of-interest.