

Program Description

A signal generator will send a wide range of frequencies that will be sent through a high power amp for interception by an airplane based direction finding system. This aircraft is an experimental airborne signal reconnaissance platform used for demonstration of technical capabilities by Lockheed Martin. This upgrade is being performed under commercial international contract with the MoD in Italy who is currently leasing the aircraft for their own internal use.