

Exhibit 1

The experimental transmission system will be attached to terrestrial animals and will be used to collect real-time video and audio. This information will be used by scientists as part of ongoing research into animal behavior in their natural habitat free from the influence of humans. There are no existing forms of radio communications to perform this function and therefore this transmission equipment is required to perform the research.