

14 April 2006 RavenWing, Inc. (Form 442 File No. 0196-EX-PL-2006) Narrative Statement to the question:

"Is this authorization to be used for providing communications essential to a research project?"

Based on the information desired (A description of the nature of the research project being conducted, A showing that the communications facilities requested are necessary for the research project, and A showing that existing communications facilities are inadequate), RavenWing provides the following narrative:

RavenWing is developing software and software-based communications solutions for GSM modems and mobile phone devices. The solutions being developed require cellular infrastructure support and pre-release communications/network services that are not available on the local GSM provider networks. As such, RavenWing will utilize a nanoBTS private GSM cell base station to create a small, localized test network within its spaces. RavenWing plans to operate the system within a generally shielded area and with attenuators to reduce the radiated power level (the target level being -1dBm or 1mW). Without the use of this system, RavenWing will not be able to develop its custom software applications in conjunction with its partners for deployment on worldwide-capable GSM handsets.
