I'm unsure if what we are doing counts as product development. We are a software company that makes middleware for Military systems. So we are continuing to develop our software which is already released.

But we are not making new hardware. We are using existing military radios, and using the GPS feed from those radios to inform the location to the user. Our goal with the license is to be able to use the radios indoors for the simple purpose of getting GPS signal to the radios for location and timing purposes.
