

The Experimental License will be used to support experimentation and research of new wireless technologies, particularly related to those offering telecommunications services to Verizon's customers. The license will be used in circumstances that contribute to the development, extension, expansion and or improved utilization of the radio art, often along lines not already investigated. Such investigations will include expanded services and improved communications links.