

The label will be applied to the RDU behind the battery in the battery compartment.

The RDU is a handheld unit no bigger than a cell phone. The space is limited for containing all the label information when there are many contoured surfaces.

The label will be readily visible at the time of purchase because the device will be marketed with the battery installed.

In addition, the batteries are designed for readily removal and whenever the batteries are removed for recharging or replacement the label will be visible.
