

An electronic unit to be fitted inside a tyre, (referred to as an RTPMS transmitter) mounted to the valve stem, periodically measures tyre pressure, temperature and rotation direction. By means of RF communication, this pressure, temperature and rotation direction information is transmitted along with a unique ID to an ECU (receiver) which is fitted in the car.