I would like to make note of a few issues surrounding this application. I spoke with Frank Coperitch regarding "covering" two versions of the same product with one certification application. Although he told me what he was offering me was his opinion and not "policy" he did comment that since the two devices are so similar with respect to the RF portion of the devices and their RF performance, that he felt that a single application was acceptable.

Unfortunately, our schedule does not allow waiting for one grant and then doing a permissive change, and filing for two different grants is not preferable due to the fact that this would result in two different FCC ID's which would effect labels for the devices and so on.

Taking all this into account, I followed Frank's suggestion that a single application seemed acceptable. If this is not the case, then please let me know via email as soon as possible because we are on a very tight schedule.

At this time, even a preliminary manual is not available however I have submitted the RF Exposure warning statement that will be in the manual. I will upload a preliminary version of the manual as soon as it is available.

Also at this time, the final product name has not been chosen, as soon as it is I will notify the FCC.

Sincerely
