

The CDMA module used in the NC800 gateway is tuned during production testing of the module. Factory automated test fixtures set the power output of the phone to the target level. The power is then re-measured to ensure the target value is met.