Dear Mr. Yang,

Please address following issues.

Q#1: Please explain the function of the equipped WLAN. Except the call forwarding from mobile phone, can it be used to transmitter data, for example, download the MP3 file from the PC via wireless?

Q#2: Per the test plot, the test result of 6dB bandwidth is not 6dB bandwidth but 26dB BW. Please provide 6dB BW test result.

Q#3: Per FCC DTS test procedure, RF antenna conducted test should scan up through 10th harmonic but not only the band edge test. So please the test plot of L/M/H channels scanning up to 10th harmonic to demonstrate the compliance.

Q#4: Except hand held and fixed configurations, please confirm whether this device can also be operated in body-worm configuration when listening to the music or receiving phone call. Besides, please add the necessary RF exposure statement to the user manual per Part 2.1091/2.1093.

Q#5: Since this device is also classified as a PC peripheral, the attached Part 15B test report is required to be filed for another application as a PC peripheral under the same FCC ID. Please submit. Or if customer is seeking to comply with DOC rule, then please add the FCC DOC logo to the label.

Best Regards,

Lucy
