Hi, Tim,

- 1) No, we don't have. Normally, the signed back quotation form is the POA recognized by our customer.
- 2) We did submit it, but I will ask Linda to re-submit it again.
- 3) We did some similiar projects recently but never been requested for this. We did inform the customer for this requirement, but as usual, it is not possible to put such information in the users manual since they maybe will sell the product to different distributor. So, a separate sheet while they find a new buyer will be a better choice for them. Taking this chance, I would like to re-inform you just as I did before to Bill that I know your request is reasonable, but we could not ignore the fact the ,  as well as  never request such letter. That already become a big point that our customer can complain about. So, personally I think we can just do our job to inform the customer this requirement, and let them to do what they need to do instead of insisting to see the letter.
- 4) Revised manual will be submitted to you.
- 5) Revised report will be submitted to you.

Alan
