Terry:

We have reviewed your request for XM to FCC ID inside the battery compartment. At the present time we are reviewing our policies for label placement for such devices. At the present time, given the circumstances you describe, we would allow XM to place the labels in the battery compartment, at least on an interim basis.

We expect to finalize our review of a long term policy soon. In order to expedite processing of the applications, I have copied this message to Tim Johnson of ATCB.

Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions.

Thanks,

Hi Rashmi,

One last question that just surfaced with the TCB involves label placement. Historically, XM has placed the FCC ID inside the battery compartment, underneath the batteries but not on the cover. ATCB says that FCC Lab permission is now required for labels placed in the battery compartment except in the case of cell and cordless phones. We would like permission to continue to label XM radios in this same manner, at least until we have had an opportunity to make changes at the factory for future production. Thanks for your assistance with this.

Regards.

Terry
