

User's Manual for "Remoto" Replacement Remote Control

The Remoto replacement remote control can be programmed to mimic many different original remote controls. The features and functions that were controlled by the original remote control can be exactly replicated by this device. Operation of the Remoto is dependent upon the information that is downloaded from the RU1 Cloning Machine. Each channel from the original remote control must first be copied independently and will be replayed by the Remoto according to the placement of the channel during programming. After original remote control has been copied by the RU1 Cloning Machine and the information downloaded to the Remoto, the Remoto will perform the exact functions as the original by pressing the buttons that were assigned during the cloning process.
