(5) For client devices that have software configuration control to operate in different modes (active scanning in some and passive scanning in others) in different bands (devices with multiple equipment classes or those that operate on non-DFS frequencies) or modular devices which configure the modes of operations through software, the application must provide software and operations description on how the software and / or hardware is implemented to ensure that proper operations modes cannot be modified by end user or an installer.

There is a general purpose PC module in the device that has two WIFI cards connected to it. A Linux operating system is driving the PC and the WIFI cards from the software side. A special customized and preconfigured Linux image is installed from the factory. The predefined configuration of the Linux kernel contains only one global regulatory domain which limits the use of frequencies and power transmission. There are no updates of the operating system or its configuration triggered after the initial setup. Administrator level access to the operating system is only possible for authorized product support personnel.
