To your comment,I had added the schemetic of TX part. Please view response as follows:

- 1) The TX is a separate board. Note that the schematic for the TX board should normally be provided as required by Part 2 of the rules. However if this board is purchased from another manufacturer (and is unrelated to SDI Technologies, Inc) and a schematic is not available, then optionally a parts list showing the manufacturer and particular part/model number or a detailed specifications sheet showing the manufacturer model should be provided. However if the board is built by SDI or any of its related companies, a schematics should be provided.
