63.18(d)

DolEx Dollar Express, Inc. has not previously held a Section 214 authorization.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 11

This exhibit sets forth the ownership structure of DolEx Dollar Express, Inc., the pro forma assignee of the international Section 214 authorization of LatinTel, Inc. (LatinTel) (ITC-214-20080213-00055). LatinTel was a 62.5%-owned subsidiary of Palladium Equity Partners III, LP. (Palladium) through two intervening wholly owned subsidiaries. Under the pro forma reorganization of the company, Palladium's ownership interest has increased to 69.7%. Two new subsidiaries, Money Transfer Acquisition, Inc. and Money Transfer Holdings, LP are now in the ownership chain between Palladium and the certificatee entity, DolEx Dollar Express, Inc. A chart depicting the pre- and post-assignment structures is attached. As the chart makes clear, no substantial change in control has occurred because Palladium was, and remains, in control of the certificated entity.

The information called for by Section 63.18 of the rules for each entity in the chain of ownership with a 10% or greater equity interest is set forth below.

Two entities hold 10 % or greater interests in Palladium Equity Partners III, L.P.:

ANSWER TO QUESTION 13

The controlling entity, Palladium Equity Partners III, LP has increased its controlling interest from 62.5 to 69.7% by the removal of Latintel, Inc. from the ownership structure. This was accomplished by a "Class D" tax free reorganization in which all of the assets of LatinTel and several other non-FCC regulated companies wholly owned by Latinvest Holding Company II, Inc. were transferred to Money Transfer Acquisition Inc. (MTAI). As part of the same reorganization, these assets were immediately contributed to DolEx Dollar Express, Inc. (DolEx). As of October 18, 2010 when LatinTel's original notification was filed, MTAI was 100% owned by Money Transfer Holdings, LP, as depicted in the ownership chart submitted with the original filing. MTAI has since issued non-voting common stock in MTAI to the entities which transferred their assets to MTAI in order to complete the tax-free exchange. Money Transfer Holdings, LP thus owns 100% of the voting common stock of MTAI, while other Palladium subsidiaries own non-voting common stock amounting to 20% of MTAI's equity. An updated ownership chart is attached to reflect that Money Transfer Holdings, LP holds 100% of the voting stock and 80% of the equity in MTAI. No other entity owns as much as 10% of MTAI.

LatinTel, Inc., Latinvest Holding Company II, Inc. and Latinvest Investment Company II, LLC continue to exist as separate, non-revenue generating legal entities, though since LatinTel no longer offers service to the public, it may be dissolved or merged into some other entity in the future.

Money Transfer Holdings LP was created by Palladium Equity Partners III, LP as a vehicle for acquisition of money transfer companies like DolEx. MTAI was created specifically to hold the stock of DolEx through the transaction described above. The transaction is therefore best viewed as an intra-company reorganization via a swap of assets and stock between sister entities, all of which were -- and are -- ultimately controlled by Palladium Equity Partners III, LP.
