Rockwell Collins completes acquisition of DataPath, Inc.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (June 1, 2009) – Rockwell Collins, Inc. (NYSE: COL) has completed the acquisition of DataPath, Inc., a global leader in creating satellite-based communication networks.

Under the terms of the agreement, Rockwell Collins has acquired all outstanding shares of DataPath in a cash transaction worth approximately $130 million. DataPath, which includes the wholly owned subsidiary SWE-DISH Satellite Solutions AB, will operate under the Rockwell Collins brand, with financial results reported as part of the company's Government Systems business.

In 2008, DataPath reported revenues of $243 million. The acquisition is expected to be neutral to Rockwell Collins' fiscal year 2009 earnings.

"DataPath's mobile multi-band satellite terminals, network integration expertise, strong customer relationships and highly regarded field personnel provide complementary capabilities to Rockwell Collins' existing networked communication offerings," said Al Caslavka, vice president and general manager, C3I Solutions for Rockwell Collins. "The result is a comprehensive portfolio that addresses the entire communications spectrum."

Rockwell Collins (NYSE: COL) is a pioneer in the development and deployment of innovative communication and aviation electronics solutions for both commercial and government applications. Our expertise in flight deck avionics, cabin electronics, mission communications, information management and simulation and training is delivered by nearly 20,000 employees, and a global service and support network that crosses 27 countries.
