Neither the transferor, Astrium Holding SAS ("Astrium Holding"), nor the transferee, EADS North America Holdings, Inc. ("ENAH"), directly holds any international Section 214 authority.

Answer to Question 11

ENAH, the transferee, is a direct, wholly-owned subsidiary of European Aeronautic Defence and Space Company EADS N.V. ("EADS"), a Netherlands entity. The ownership of EADS was described in applications for consent to the acquisition of Vizada and its affiliates by an EADS subsidiary, which were granted by the Commission in December of 2011.²

Answer to Question 13

This filing reports a pro forma transfer of control that occurred through a minor restructuring of the Vizada ownership chain approved by the Commission last year. The figures below show the ultimate ownership and control of Vizada before and after the restructuring.

As shown in Figure 1, prior to consummation of the restructuring, Vizada's immediate parent company Mobsat Holding US Corp. ("MHUS") was owned through a number of intermediate subsidiaries by a wholly-owned subsidiary of EADS, Astrium B.V. ("Astrium"), formerly known as EADS Astrium N.V. ENAH, a Delaware corporation, is a sister company of Astrium. In order to effectuate the restructuring, the shares of MHUS were transferred by its parent Mobsat Holding Norway AS successively up the ownership chain to EADS and by EADS to its subsidiary ENAH. These transfers occurred contemporaneously (i.e., all the transactions were completed in a single day). Concurrent with consummation of the transfer, Vizada's name was changed to Astrium Services Government, Inc., and MHUS was renamed Astrium Americas, Inc.

Figure 2 represents the current ownership structure. As depicted there, Astrium Government (formerly Vizada), a Delaware corporation, remains an indirect, wholly-owned subsidiary of EADS. The only new entity in the Astrium Government ownership chain is ENAH, a U.S. corporation.
