Neither the transferor, Astrium Americas, Inc. ("Astrium Americas," formerly known as Mobsat Holding US Corp.), nor the transferee, Astrium Services Business Communications AS ("Astrium AS," formerly known as Vizada AS), directly holds any international Section 214 authority.

Answer to Question 11

Astrium AS, the transferee, is an indirect, wholly-owned subsidiary of European Aeronautic Defence and Space Company EADS N.V. ("EADS"), a Netherlands entity. The ownership of EADS was described in applications for consent to the acquisition of Marlink and its affiliates by an EADS subsidiary, which were granted by the Commission in December of 2011.¹

Answer to Question 13

This filing reports a pro forma transfer of control that occurred through a minor restructuring of the Marlink ownership chain approved by the Commission last year. The figures below show the ultimate ownership and control of Marlink before and after the restructuring.

As shown in Figure 1, prior to consummation of the restructuring, Marlink's immediate parent company Mobsat Holding US Corp. ("MHUS") was owned through a number of intermediate subsidiaries by a wholly-owned subsidiary of EADS, Astrium B.V. Vizada AS was a sister company of MHUS. In order to effectuate the restructuring, the shares of Marlink were transferred by MHUS to its parent Mobsat Holding Norway AS ("MHN"), and by MHN to its subsidiary Vizada AS. These transfers occurred contemporaneously (i.e., all the transactions were completed in a single day). Concurrent with consummation of the transfer, Marlink's name was changed to Astrium Services Business Communications, Inc., and Vizada AS was renamed Astrium Services Business Communications AS.

Figure 2 represents the current ownership structure. As depicted there, Astrium Business (formerly Marlink), a Delaware corporation, remains an indirect, wholly-owned subsidiary of EADS.
