

Foreign Ownership of Applicant

CSC TKR LLC (the “Applicant”), through its parent companies, is indirectly owned and controlled by Patrick Drahi, a citizen of Israel. On May 3, 2016, the Commission’s Wireline Competition Bureau, International Bureau, Media Bureau, and Wireless Telecommunications Bureau approved the transaction proposed by the Applicant’s parent companies – Altice N.V. and Cablevision Systems Corporation (“Cablevision”) – under which Altice N.V., a publicly-traded company incorporated in the Netherlands and indirectly owned and controlled by Mr. Drahi, acquired 100 percent of the shares of Cablevision.¹ In 2018, the Applicant filed applications for Commission consent to pro forma transfers of control as part of a corporate reorganization to remove several intermediate entities and separate the Applicant from Altice N.V. through a distribution of the Applicant’s shares to Altice N.V. holders. Each of those transactions has been approved.² As a result, the ultimate controlling party of Altice N.V. – Mr. Drahi – remains the ultimate controlling party of the Applicant
