12. Description

Journal Broadcast Corporation (Journal) respectfully submits this request for extension special temporary authority (STA) to permit the continued operation of a satellite earth station, for a period of 60 days. Journal previously held a license (E850092) for a station at this location. Journal discovered that an application to renew the license for that station was inadvertently not timely filed. On September 24, 2008, Journal filed a request for STA to operate the earth station pending the filing of an FCC Form 312 application for a new earth station. That STA request was granted on September 29, 2008, providing STA for operation of the station through November 27, 2008. SES-STA-20080924-01233. On November 21, 2008 Journal filed a request to extend the existing STA while it completed preparation and filing of an FCC Form 312 application for a new earth station. On November 28, 2008 the request to extend the existing STA was granted, providing STA for operation of the station through December 12, 2008. SES-STA-20081120-01504. On December 3, 2008, an FCC Form 312 application for a new earth station was filed with the FCC. SES-LIC-INTR2008-02806. On December 5, 2008, a request for STA to permit use of the new earth station prior to grant of its new license application was filed with the FCC. SES-STA-20081205-01539. That request was granted on December 9, 2008 and expires on January 13, 2009. This request seeks to extend that STA while the new earth station application remains pending. This request does not involve any changes in the technical parameters of the prior authorization. Grant of this request for STA is in the public interest as it is vital for Journal to have continued access to this earth station in order to continue providing satellite transmissions of local and regional programming for broadcast to the public.
