12. Description

Given the current military situation in Syria, this application (made by an American citizen based in Israel) requests immediate permission to establish an earth station that tests a Biotic Technology (tm) sensor (built by the applicant) which is intended to record activity along an electro-biotic frequency. This form of ecological quantization is experimental although preliminary tests have demonstrated great success in recording such activity in the Middle East and elsewhere (see attachment 1 and 2). The implications for such research include advances for military hardware and intelligence gathering as well as a breakthrough in ground based remote sensing applications. According to the guidelines, the FCC is authorized to issue a Special Temporary Authority (STA) for those subject-matter areas falling under this specific purpose, e.g. for emergency situations and natural disasters. This application makes a strong showing that, due to extraordinary and extenuating circumstances, the applicant cannot wait for the normal licensing process to conclude.
