

Public Interest Statement
(Response to Question A21)

Gogo is a leading provider of in-flight connectivity. The contemplated initial public offering (“IPO”) will provide additional capital to expand the availability and scope of Gogo’s services and will strengthen competition in the market for in-flight communications services. The Commission has previously identified the ability to access a larger capital market, as well as other benefits of IPOs, as being in the public interest.¹ Therefore, grant of the instant application would serve the public interest, convenience and necessity.

¹ See, e.g., North American Numbering Plan Administration Neustar, Inc., Order, 19 FCC Rcd 16982 (rel. Aug. 26, 2004) at ¶ 28 (finding that a transfer of control through an IPO would serve the public interest by permitting the applicant to access a larger capital market, providing for more transparency through SEC filings, and increasing incentives to comply with regulatory requirements).
